Safety board to review 11-month-old plane crash

By Don Green

Nearly 11 months after the worst air disaster in Upland's history, the National Transportation and Safety Board will review Monday what caused the twin - engine Aero Commander to crash into an apartment building, killing the pilot and all four

Bob Spermo of the safety board's information systems in Washington, D.C., said this week the Upland plane crash will be before the board for determination of probable cause.

The light plane bound for Mexico crashed shortly after takeoff 7:40 a.m. June 6, 1977, from Cable Airport. A fire following explosion of the plane's fuel tank destroyed much of the four - plex apartment building at 1051 W. Springfield St., where the craft rammed into the structure's second story and also destroyed a parked car.

A 56 - page report by the safety board's Los Angeles office points to some of the lingering questions the five - member federal board will

Why did the pilot take off from Cable Runway 6 rather than Runway 24, the runway generally used for takeoffs except on windy

Paul Cable, general manager of Cable Airport, said this week about 90 percent of takeoffs are from Runway 24 to the west.

The airport prefers Runway 24 because of difficulties in making radio contact with control at Ontario International Airport (OIA) from Runway 6, where takeoft starts from the southwest end of the airport, Cable said.

He noted the west elevation is about 25 feet lower and radio contact is also obstructed by buildings for planes using Runway 6 for a

takeoff to the east

First communications between the pilot, William Miller of La Palma, and Ontario TRACON (terminal radar approach control) were relayed by the pilot of an airborne craft. Once the Aero Commander was airborne, direct radio communications with Ontario TRACON were established.

No winds June 6 warranted the takeoff from Runway 6.

Virgil Hoiden - an operations inspector with the Federal Aviation Administration at OIA — said the runway choice was up to the pilot. Miller's choice of runways leads to the question of how familiar he was with Cable Airport. Cable noted Miller "supposedly had flown out of here before, but not to my knowledge.

Guy Moshier Jr., air safety investigator with the safety board's Los Angeles office, said this week, "I couldn't get any feel for how often he had flown out of there.'

"But my gut feeling was that he hadn't very often," said Moshier, the chief investigator of the crash. Did the plane encounter instrument trouble?

The impact of the crash and the fire that followed left little intact for safety board investigators. The report states, "Portions of the engines were melted and all engine lines and hoses were destroyed in the intense fire.

Miller's last words to Ontario TRACON were: "We're going back out - we lost our gyro," according to the report.

The report adds, "Although the transcription says 'climbing' back out, the tape sounds like 'going' back out.

Moshier said the phrase is subject to more than one interpretation.

'Going back out' could mean Miller was trying to get back to Cable Airport or that he was trying to climb above the low but dense cloud deck (accounting for instrument flight rules takeoff), which cleared at about 500 feet.

"I feel like he was trying to get down under the clouds and find the airport," Moshier said, adding the plane could have lost altitude in its final 270 - degree turn just before the

The report states the two gyros themselves - used to show if the plane is flying level to the horizon showed no evidence of malfunction. However, the gyro vacuum pumps and lines to the vacuum instruments were destroyed

Moshier said that by examining the wreckage he could not determine one way or the other whether the gyros were operational.

The transponder, used to send out signals for radar contact with TRACON, was also destroyed by impact and the fire.

The transcript shows Miller reported the transponder was on and "squawking," or sending out a signal, at the assigned code, but TRACON was unable to pick up any issues a probable cause for most plane accidents, but added that the board has the option of voting the cause "undetermined.

Miller was using Pomona VOR (visible omni - directional range), a radio navigation facility, as a directional aid in departure, but never established any course toward the station, according to the report.

West End trustees sitting on an ad hoc subcommittee had recommended the schools reorganization study

The committee on district organization meeting April 19 at Etiwanda Intermediate School indicated the study would be completed as quickly as possible.

Members said that public hearings on any proposed changes might be held by September, allowing for an election on any school unifications in March 1979. District realignment could then follow in July 1980, if approved by voters.

Calls for the district reorganization study came from trustees in Rancho Cucamonga school districts following defeat March 7 of a $23.2 million ballot measure.

The measure would have provided $19.2 million for building a new high school in Rancho Cucamonga, and the city's voters supported the measure. However, voters in Ontario, Montclair and Upland convincingly rejected the financing proposal.

Committee members - including Trustee Charles Uhalley of the Chaffey district - unanimously supported the study. Uhalley said, however, the Chaffey board opposes unification and added the study would show unification makes poor sense economically.

Feeder elementary school districts into the Chaffey high school district include Ontario - Montclair, Upland and - in Rancho Cucamonga - Alta Loma, Cucamonga, Central and Etiwanda school districts.

Fights problems with recreation, jobs, counseling

HOY works to cut iuvenile delinguency

By Don Green

In Spanish "hoy" means today and the word adds a sense of urgency to a new project in Upland and Rancho Cucamonga aimed at reducing gang violence and juvenile delinquency.

Staff members of project HOY (Help Our Youth) began setting up shop last month in a small shopping center at 1230 E. Sixth St., Ontario. for a program to help youths from Upland and Rancho Cucamonga through jobs, recreation activities, tutoring and counseling.

HOY is a pilot or experimental program of the National Institute for Community Development (NICD), an organization with headquarters in San Bernardino. Armando Navarro of Cucamonga started the organization in late 1976 and serves as executive director of Navarro called barrio gang violence a "crisis and almost an epidemic." He said the roots of juvenile delinquency and gang violence are complex and are based in the economic, political and educational systems of the communities.

'We're not so presumptuous as to believe that this program is going to resolve the problem of gang violence or juvenile delinquency. It's only going to, in the long run, alleviate or mitigate the effects of these two major social problems,'

HOY is taking a "wholistic approach" to the youth problems, attempting to bring together all sectors of the community, Navarro Governmental agencies. churches, the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department, the Upland Police Department and local school districts are among the groups and agencies HOY is working with, he added.

'We're not trying to perpetuate that adversary relationship that somehow exists in the minds of some people vis - a - vis the Sheriff's Department and the youth of the community.

He added, "We've got to break those walls of hostility. We've got to break these walls down and open up a line of communication among the various agencies and sectors of our community.

He noted members of HOY helped defuse a "potentially explosive" situation involving an exchange of words between youths and sheriff's deputies at a recent dance in Cucamonga.

Navarro said, "Ultimately, if this program's going to be successful, it's because the people themselves feel this is their program. They do have some meaningful input and it is benefiting their community. He cited a community meeting April 6 at Cucamonga Elementary School that drew about 75 persons as an example of residents' support. Manuel Abundia of HOY said the project's first meeting last week in Upland got off to slower start and staff members are planning a second meeting they hope will attract more residents.

Lillian Rodriguez, director of project HOY, said the program in Rancho Cucamonga will include a stronger emphasis on recreation activities than in Upland, which has more ongoing classes and programs than the new city.

She said staff members are looking for a location in Upland to serve as a center for tutoring.

Progressista Hall, 10071 Feron

Blvd., is the HOY center for recreation activities in Cucamonga. The Rancho Cucamonga City Council last week approve a $2,000 allocation to HOY for purchase of a variety of equipment for the hall. Karl Abril, HOY's recreation coordinator for Rancho Cucamonga, another staff member and Rancho Cucamonga youths have painted the hall's interior and are otherwise rehabilitating the facility. Navarro said HOY is working with school officials in Rancho Cucamonga to start instruction in tennis, handball, boxing and karate. He added that family excursions and a one - week stay at a summer camp for youth are also planned.

HOY is attempting to "rechannel frustration" through employment, Navarro said. He noted youths employed through HOY's barrio beautification program will cover up graffiti, possibly paint murals, clean up streets and yards and make minor home repairs.

"Whatever has to be done to engender a spirit of community pride will be done in the barrio beautification program," he said.

Navarro explained HOY longer term goals are to direct youths into job skills development programs in the West End or back to school.

Gilbert Ledesma is making contacts throughout the area and as far away as the City of Industry in hopes of setting up "meaningful employment" with businesses and industry, Navarro said.

He added that Ledesma's task is complicated by continuing problems unemployment HOY has a staff of seven and will soon add three part - time workers. Navarro said the project is also getting volunteer help from the "Again, the idea is not for us to do people to do certain things for themselves," he commented. HOY will offer family counseling and is developing a summer tutorial

County losing road money

The county board of supervisors declared that Southern Californians aren't getting their share of road construction projects in return for the gasoline taxes they pay. The supervisors urged the Legislature to do something about

The imbalance in highway spending between Northern California and Southern California has grown from $69.9 million in mid-1975 to $214 million at the start of this year, the supervisors were told.

By law, 13 Southern California counties — including San Bernardino County — must receive 60 percent of all state and federal highway funds. The other 40 percent goes to the 45 Northern California counties.

Motorists pay gasoline taxes to raise that money — a state tax of 7 cents per gallon and a federal tax of 4 cents per gallon.

The supervisors have been among those who want the California Department of Transportation to spend more money on highway construction and less on highway maintenance.

The highway fund reserve is now estimated at $397 million.

The supervisors urged the Legislature to exert its control over the highway budget to correct the imbalance.

Foothill Freeway veto override attempt fails

After pressure Monday from Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Democratic floor leaders, the Assembly killed a bill that would have protected the Foothill Freeway corridor through Upland and Rancho Cucamonga.

Freeway supporters fell nine votes short of the 54 they needed to override Brown's veto of the bill.

The vote was 45 in favor of the override, 23 against it and 17 absent or not voting. On the first override attempt a week ago, the vote was 34 in favor, 29 against and the others absent or not voting.

The bill's chief author, Assemblyman Bill Lancaster, R-Covina, said the bill is dead for this year's legislative session.

It would have required the California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) to protect the freeway corridor from La Verne through Claremont, Upland and Rancho Cucamonga to the Devore Freeway and San Bernardino.

That would have been done through state purchases of land in the freeway right of way.

Although the second override attempt failed, freeway supporters appeared pleased that it took intensive lobbying efforts by Assembly Majority Leader Howard Berman, D-Sherman Oaks, and Assembly Majority Whip Art Agnos, D-San Francisco, to defeat the bill.

B.T. Collins, one of Brown's legislative assistants, was also lobbying in the Capitol corridors to persuade Assembly members not to embarrass the governor by supporting an override.

'I wish we could have done it (take an override vote) just one more time. We needed only nine more votes," Tony Malone, administrator of the Foothill Freeway Association, said.

Malone, who is also executive vice president of the Upland Chamber of Commerce, said the 45 votes freeway supporters managed to muster in support of the override attempt is in its own way a victory.

"It was a protest vote against the administration - and that would include both (Adriana) Gianturco and Brown," Malone said.

Mrs. Gianturco, the state transportation director, is expected to recommend deletion of the Foothill Freeway route from the Three area legislators - Lancaster, Assemblyman Bill McVittie, D-65th District, and Sen. Ruben S. Avala, D-32nd District - called on the California Transportation Commission Friday to act quickly to protect the route.

The commission has agreed to consider the issue of whether to keep the route in the state freeway system but declined to take immediate action. No hearing has been scheduled yet.

They expressed concern over the continuing uncertainty about the freeway right of way, which runs from La Verne through Claremont, Upland and Rancho Cucamonga to the Devore Freeway and San Bernardino.

That appeared good enough for Assemblyman Bill Lancaster, R-Covina, who said, "I think we made the commission aware of a very serious problem here.

Lancaster termed the commission's reaction "gracious" and added, "There was no quarrel."

The commission was holding only its second meeting since it came into existence, "and it has not reached the organizational point where it can make studies and take action," Lancaster said.

"It seems to me it's in the best public interest to make the purchases (of land) to protect the route," McVittie said.

If the commission finally decides to delete the route from the state freeway system, rising land values along the corridor should enable the state to sell the land without a loss, McVittie noted.

"Having the legislators involved has helped us," Malone said. "There's a new awareness of the problem now.

Seven doctors quit at county medical center

Seven doctors have resigned from the county medical center staff in the aftermath of the board of supervisors' reorganization of the center's leadership.

Among the doctors are the chairman of the hospital's department of medicine and the director and associate director of the hospital's program for training family practice doctors. All hold key positions.

The resignations may well lead to the collapse of the medical center's doctor training programs and may affect the quality of care given patients, although county officials have pledged the reorganization will not do that.

The reorganization, which the supervisors adopted April 3, will place a business administrator in charge of the medical center in San Bernardino

About 10 days later, Dr. J. Philip Loge, a physician and the medical center's current chief executive, submitted his resignation.

October, 1968, developed practically all of the doctor training programs. Five of the doctors followed suit after Loge's announcement. The latest resignation was submitted by Dr. James Drinkard, chairman of the hospital's department of medicine. His resignation was announced Friday.

As representative of the medical staff, Drinkard had urged the supervisors to delay action on the reorganization plan until the doctors had had time to study its implications for the doctor training programs and the quality of patient

But the supervisors proceeded anyway by adopting a modified reorganization plan presented by a management consultant the supervisors hired last year.

Two other key doctors who have announced they are resigning are Dr. John R. Crouch, director of the program for training 48 prospective family practice doctors, and Dr. Wendell L. Ogden, associate direc-

Drinkard, Crouch and Ogden were treating patients this morning and could not be reached for comment on their resignations.

Other doctors who have submitted resignations from the medical staff

- Dr. Philip M. Gold, director of pulmonary services.

- Dr. Conrad Hamako, director of ophthalmology and the hospital's only eye surgeon.

- Dr. William Holden, a family physician

- Dr. Stanley Bear, director of the hospital's ear, nose and throat

Their resignations coincide with those of two members of the medical center's advisory board, Dr. James R. Sullivan of Upland and Edmund Zander of Redlands.

Both Dr. Sullivan and Zander quit in protest of the supervisors' reorganization. Dr. Sullivan had some strong words about the action and said he could no longer represent the views of Supervisor Joseph Kamansky, who reappointed him.

In a related development, a representative of the center's 64 doctors-in-training (residents) said most of them are starting to look for positions elsewhere because of the uncertainty created by the supervisors' reorganization decision.

The medical center's training programs are affiliated with the UCLA School of Medicine. UCLA officials, including Chancellor Charles E. Young and the staff of the medical school, have threatened withdrawal of that affiliation in light of the supervisors' action

County preparing to overhaul general plan in West End area

San Bernardino County is preparing to overhaul its general plan to help coordinate development in the communities directly adjacent to West End cities, county planning director Ken Topping said.

Citing examples such as Upland and its San Antonio Heights, or the small, county strip between Chino and Montclair, Topping said the recent growth boom has generally sparked more forceful city-county cooperation in the West End city's spheres of influence.

Also toward that end, Topping said he's organized "area teams" in various county locations, each headed by a person with specialized knowledge of the area. One is the West Valley area team. 'I see real progress in the way the board of supervisors, citizens and developers are talking to each other," Topping said. "People were at loggerheads before - they were at loggerheads last year.

The proposed overhaul of the general plan is hoped to simplify what is now a complex and disjointed set of general plan elements, zoning codes and ordinances, said Topping.

Currently, the county has specific general plan designations for the various locales (such as mountain, desert and valley areas), but "that was drafted 15 years after the zoning ordinance was developed.' said Topping.

He said an advisory committee will be formed in May to study the proposed plan changes. The revisions would then be considered by the board of supervisors and a public hearing held on adoption "by the end of the calendar year.'

Keeping county-regulated sphere of influence communities' plans in line with those of the cities will be a top priority in the upcoming revisions, he explained.

"I believe that ultimately all those areas will be annexed and become parts of cities," Topping said. "But I don't know how long it will take to get there.

Ro

He noted that the board of supervisor's position "is not to stop growth, it is to provide for orderly

Refuting contentions in a recent Daily Report editorial, Topping said that "literally hundreds of manhours" were spent extracting concessions and modifications from developers who proposed to build houses in the Chino Hills.

AL Braves storm to victory in CIF girls basketball finals

Nan Flower, Alta Loma's 5-3 junior guard whose specialty is crowd-pleasing, high archers from long range, poured in 27 points Saturday, and the Braves stormed to a 51-36 victory over Santa Clara to win the CIF (2A) girls' basketball championship.

A crowd of 1,780 watched the action in the Long Beach City College gymnasium. Bishop Diego outlasted Valley Christian, 36-33, for the 1A crown.

Fowler became the darling of the afternoon throng as she tossed in 11 of 20 floor attempts and five of six free throw tries.

Fowler had eight baskets and 17 of her points by halftime as the Braves rolled to a 26-16 advantage.

Fowler had less success in the second half but still added 10 points to keep the Braves in front. Janet Davis, the Braves' 6-3 sophomore center who fouled out with 2:06 remaining, added 15 points for the winners and a game-high 16 rebounds. Leah Felty and Linda Saddlemire contributed four points

Santa Clara center Jo Gabbard was the only Saint to reach double figures with 20 points. She grabbed 13 rebounds.

Alta Loma, which led by as many as 14 points (36-22) in the third quarter, still had some anxious moments as Santa Clara's Frontier League champions rallied to within eight points.

The Saints were still in striking distance at a 44-36 deficit with 4:14 to play, but they were to go scoreless the rest of the way.

Alta Loma, which finished the season with a glossy 24-2 record, hit at a 48.8 percent clip from the floor compared to just 26.8 for the

The Saints, whose veteran coach Lou Cvijanovich appeared dismaved by his team's lack of outside shooting, were only six for 24 from the charity stripe for 25 percent. Alta Loma made seven of 12 for 58.3 percent.

Santa Clara, outrebounded 45-34, did have the edge in one department-turnovers. The Braves made 26, the Saints 16.

ARE YOU OPERATING UNDER A FICTITIOUS BUSINESS NAME?

If you are, are you aware that the California Business and Professions Code requires you to do the following:

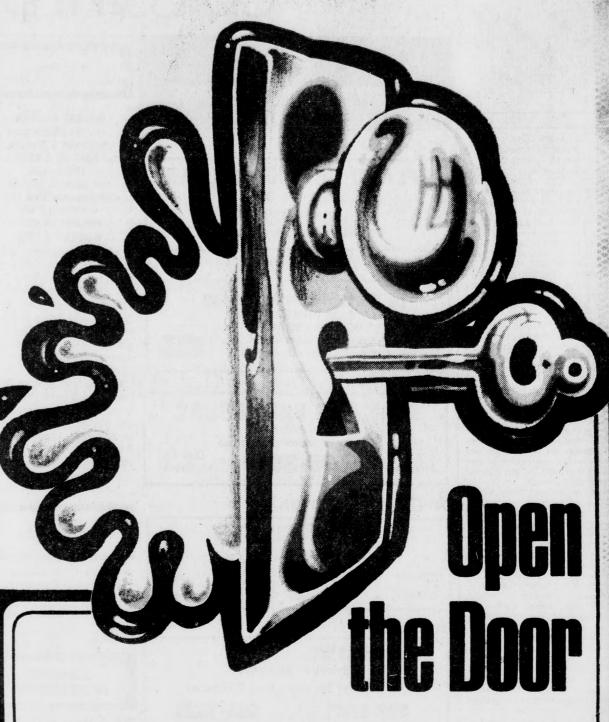

File a fictitious business name statement with the county clerk in the county where you have your principal place of business

Have the statement published once a week for four weeks in a newspaper circulating in the area where you are doing business. File a new statement on or before December 31 of the fifth year after the year in which the original statement was filed. The purpose of this statute is to allow the public to know the true identities of those with whom it has business dealings. Filing is also in your best interest since in the event of non-compliance you will be prevented from maintaining any action on an account or contract or with regard to any transaction that you have had while operating under you

You should consult with your attorney for further details regarding compliance.
